History of Brewing in Pennsylvania

Pennsylvania has a long and rich brewing history, dating back to the colonial era. The state's first brewery was established in Philadelphia in 1683, and by the 19th century, Pennsylvania was one of the leading beer-producing states in the country. The state's brewing industry declined in the early 20th century due to Prohibition, but it has rebounded in recent years, thanks to the growing popularity of craft beer.
